A Soldier's Valentine.

BY C. L. WEDDING, MANILA, P. I.

I am sick of Kingly Kinglets,

And of chocolate colored belles,

If these gay and festive islands

There's a heavy home-sick feeling

And it seeks to find expression—

Where the Filipinos dwell.

In this lonely heart of mine,

In a Soldier's Valentine.

That I left beyond the sea.

Though a regiment of soldiers,

Yunkee, heroes march with me,

So my cartridge belt is empty,

And my buttons need a shine,

While I write the blotted pages

When the birds begin to mate,

Lying by your breakfast plate.

And the pen is not my line,

In a Soldier's Valentine.

It is best to put the question

In a ununer plain and clear.

For a lean and ragged private,

Will you cross the rolling brine

To the Philippines in mswer

To a Soldier's Valentine?

In Manila's famous bay

Came a vision clad in gray,

Saying to the grizzled Colonel,

With a smile and blush divine,

In a Soldier's Valentine?

For a tattered Valentine?

You will see this wayworn letter

Though it smells of stale tobacco,

These are things that you must pardon

Will you leave God's chosen country,

When the Transport dropped her unchor

With the Regulars and the "Rockies,"

"Will you pass me through to Luzon,

Of a Soldier's Valentine.

On a February morning

I am lonesome for the sweetheart
